Ninety Days on the Farm.

This morning about 1 o'clock Mr. W. W. Colquitt, son of the Georgia Senator, was aroused by hearing the smashing of a large pane of glass at his basement door, at his house, No. 310 North Carolina avenue, and a policeman was in the neighborhood at the time. When both Mr. Colquitt and the officer made an investigation they found a man named Albert Kendrick near the door where the glass had been broken. He denied that he had done the damage, but there was no one else there to have done it, and he was arrested.

When the prisoner reached the Police Court this morning he was charged under the vagrancy act with being a suspicious person.

He repeated his denial of the charge, which availed him nothing, for Judge Kim-ball gave him ninety days on the farm, in Cefault of security.

Two Suspicious Persons.

William B. Edmonston, who says he lives near Leesburg, and Harvey Wainwright, a boy from Richmond, were given a hearing in the Police Court this afternoon as suspicious persons. They were found loitering about Pennsylvania avenue and 3d street southeast last evening and Policeman Ryan arrested them on complaint of a merchant. Edmonston, who served a month on the farm for his al-leged questionable conduct nearly a year ago, was sent down for fifteen days, while the Richmond boy was released to leave the city.

Fred Braasted, who yesterday granted the union scale to his miners at Ishpeming, Mich., intends resuming operations at his mine in about a week. The mine is not in shape for resumption today, certain repairs being necessary in the lower levels.

How It is Proposed to Dispose of the Questions at Issue.

CHOOSING THE INCINERATING SYSTEMS

Contractor to Obtain Proposals From the Furnace Men.

AN EARLY SETTLEMENT

Gradually the garbage tangle is unraveling itself. Before another week rolls away it is believed citizens will have reason to felicitate themselves upon the final settlement of the matter.

creey has been maintained by those interested, and little information has been given out concerning the exact status of the case. Warfield's signature to the five-year garbage contract, they agreed, upon the earnest solicitation of the contractor, to reconsider their previous action specifying the Star) to relieve the contractor of any embarrassment which might arise if the Com-Star) to relieve the contractor of any embarrassment which might arise if the Commissioners insisted upon a specific system. It was argued that the representatives of such a system, knowing that their system must be used, would boost the price and compel the contractor to come to terms. The Commissioners, as stated above, agreed to reconsider, and gave notice to that effect. Those familiar with the situation, however, believe that the Commissioners are very decided in their preference for the Smith system. It was only after a personal examination of the workings of the plants in several cities, which was supplemented by a report of the health officer and reports from the city officials, that they decided the matter. So it is presumed that they will not go back on their first action, and that the contractor will be obliged to use the Smith system for one. As far as the other system is concerned—that is, the plant which they allow the contractor to select—the Commissioners are willing to approve the Brown system. As contractor to select—the Commissioners are willing to approve the Brown system. As far as the Dixon crematory is concerned, they have already expressed themselves as opposed to its introduction in Washington, believing that it cannot, as now constructed, do the work. As one of the Commissioners recently said to a reporter of The Star:

Star:

"The Dixon system, as at present constructed, is not at all suitable for Washington. The Commissioners will not allow its introduction here, unless it is materially changed and its efficacy proved."

So it would reem from this statement (which is understood to be the opinion of the board of Commissioners) that this system has no chance in the present fight. Now, it was authoritatively stated today that the contractor had given the subject careful consideration during the past week, and that his position was simply this:

With a full knowledge of what the Commissioners wanted, and for the purpose of safely intrenching-himself against possible loss, he had asked the representatives of the Smith and the Brown and the Dixon crematories to submit propositions, stating specifically what they would guarantee in the way of destroying the garbage, how long it would take them to erect a plant, what the cost would be, and what kind of a bond they would furnish indemnifying him against loss, either from infringement suits or municipal interference in the event the plant did not properly perform its functions. These several propositions have the plant did not properly perform its functions. These several propositions have been submitted, and Mr. Henry E. Davis, who represents the contractor, has carefully gone over them, finserting where it was necessary certain stipulations for the benefit of the contractor. Now, all of these amended propositions have been put in shape and sent to Baltimore, that Mr. Edwin Warfield and the other gentlemen directly interested in the contract might examine them. They will likely be returned today, and the representatives of the several systems called upon to sign an agreement, binding themselves to furnish the plant at a specified price, upon the condition that the Commissioners approve their system. When this is done Mr. Warfield will repair to the District building, lay the matter before the Commissioners and ask them to designate which of the three systems they desire erected. The Commissioners were all choose the Smith and Brown cretems they desire erected. The Commissioners will choose the Smith and Brown crematories. There is little doubt on that score. They have already declared their preference for the Smith plant, and the contractor has stated applied that he has stated publicly that he contractor has stated publicly that he wanted the Brown system. After the Commissioners have formally passed upon this proposition the contracts between the contractor and the men of "systems" will be finally closed, and preparations begun for the erection of the plants.

The South Capitol Street Site. It is authoritatively stated that the South Capitol street site (the location of the old reduction plant) will be first built upon. That is, of course, contingent upon the outcome of the vigorous fight the residents and property owners in that neighborhood and property owners in that neighborhood are going to make against the erection of the plant in that section. They express themselves as determined to suffer no longer at the hands of the authorities, and will go into court before submitting to the erection of a garbage crematory in their midst. One of the interested citizens, who, by the way, is a large property holder, said to a Star reporter, discussing the situation: "It seems unjust that the Commissioners should again thrust a nuisance upon us.

"It seems unjust that the Commissioners should again thrust a nuisance upon us. We have had enough garbage. For months we suffered from that old reduction plant until Providence was kind enough to interfere and destroyed it by fire. Why not give some other section of the city a chance at it? We have no rows of brown-stone houses down there, it is true, but we live there, own our property ard pry taxes in the same proportion as those in the wealthier sections. It's no use to say that there will be no nuisance. How would you like to sit on your front porch these beautiful evenings and witness the endless procession of foul-smelling garbage carts passing your door? These garbage plants are not intended for cities. Put them in the suburbs, where there can be no complaint."

Last night about 11 o'clock an alarm of fire was turned in from box 415 for fire in rear of Geo. N. Campbell's house, No. 500 K street pouthwest. Two carriages were destroyed. The damage amounted to about $800, and the property was not insured.

Robert Hoy Acquitted. charged with having used profanity at the base ball park two days ago, as published in yesterday's Star, was tried in the Police Court today. James O'Day, who was once a special policeman, made the complaint, but his testimony was not substantiated. Lawyer Clark, who appeared for the defendant, witnessed the arrest, and told the court that he did not hear any profane language used. The charge was dismissed.

Members All Tagged. A unique feature of the meeting of the association is a method for the identification of members introduced by Professor Wiley, the secretary. In past meetings much difficulty has been experienced in the identification of speakers, which was important, especially as a verbatim report of the proceedings is taken. Every member of the ssociation is known to every other memssociation is known to every other member by reputation, though, as they are located in various parts of the country, there is little opportunity for them to get to know one another personally. To overcome this difficulty Professor Wiley has the names of all the members written on a blackboard and numbered, and each is provided with a tag bearing a number to correspond with that which identifies him on the blackboard, which is placed in plain sight of every one in the hall. This arrangement has become wonderfully popular, and it is said that it is apt to be adopted by conventions generally.

The association will be in session again tomorrow. tomorrow.

Work Ordered.

A large number of authors competed for these prizes, and some remarkable stories resulted. The one to be commenced tomorrow is entitled "The Twinkling of an Eye," by Brander Matthews, and will be found to be a detective story of intense interest, bristling with sharp trickery and full of strong situations. It will be continued several days next week. This is but one of the many features of tomorrow's Star. The following are a few more:

JUDGE KIMBALL'S DAY

He Performs Double Duty and Sentences Many Offenders.

ELEVATOR BOY'S

The More Serious Cases Attended To First.

A VOUDOO DOCTOR

Judge Kimball is now holding both branches of the Police Court, as Judge Miller is still on his vacation, and this morning court convened earlier than usual. The judge also reversed the regular order and held court upstairs, giving consideration to the more serious cases before hearing the minor offenders. When court opened Clerk Potts called a colored boy named George Watkins from the dock and arraigned him on a charge of assault. "Not guilty," he responded, when arraign

"Will you be tried by the judge or jury?"

he was asked.
"The judge will do for me," he responded. This assault occurred nearly a month ago in the Richmond Flats, where the prisoner tim, Miss Susie Diggs, a young white wo-rim, Miss Susie Diggs, a young white wo-man, was also employed there.

She told the court that on the occasion of the assault she attempted to get in the elevator and the boy pushed her out. She made another effort to get on the car, whereupon he pushed her out and she at-tempted to spit in his face.

"Then he pursued me," she said, "and kicked me."

kicked me."
"Where did he kick you?"

"Where did he kick you?"
"In the stomach."
"Did you have a doctor attend you?"
"I was in the hospital three weeks."
"What hospital?"
"The Emergency."
Two other employes of the flats gave corroborative testimony, and the court heard the prisoner's statement.
"She wanted to get in the elevator during lunch hour," said the boy, "and I wanted to keep her out. There were two other ladies in there and I was going to put them out, too." He told the judge that when he put Miss Diggs out the second time she attempted to spit in his face. "And," he said, "I kicked her, but did not intend to hurt er, as it was done in fun."

"What kind of fun do you call that?" The prisoner made no response.
Dr. Smith of the Emergency Hospital was called, but he did not respond, as he was called, but he did not respond, as he is out of town.

Judge Kimball, in disposing of the case, said that the assault was a serious one, and had the girl died the prisoner would have been tried for murder.
"The young lady had no right to spit in your face," the judge said to the prisoner, "and if that had not been done you would get a more severe sentence than I am going to impose. In consideration of this, I am going to make your sentence only ninety days."

A Bad Guess.

Hattie Sears, a colored girl, who went out looking for a fight yesterday, did not nake a good guess at the sentence Judge Kimball would impose. She said she would beat Blanche Wilson and go down for fifteen days. "I'm tired of having you slur me," said Hattle, "and I'm going to beat you and give myself up. I can't get but fifteen days, and while I am in the workhouse you vill be in the hospital."

"What did I say about you?" the Wilson girl asked her girl asked her.

"You slurred me, and that's enough," was Hattle's response: And then she kept her word about the beating.
"What have you to say!" the court asked the prisoner.

"Nothing," she answered. "I hit her, and that's all there is about it."
"Thirty days." Green-Eyed Monster.

A young colored man whose name was given as William Slaughter was in the procession because he had used personal vioence toward Loudon Shears. The green-eyed monster figured very largely in the case, and the trouble arose over the fact that Mrs. Slaughter had bearded Shears, and her husband wanted to get rid of him.

"He had been boarding with my wife," said the defendant, "and when I went home and ordered him to leave he became troublesome and wanted to fight.

"And I told him"—started the defendant.
"Never mind what you told him," interrupted the judge. "Tell me what he did to

'He hit me with a brick." "Where did he strike you?"

The young man who boarded at the house made his statement. He said he had only delivered a message, and the husband got mad with him. They had some trouble, and then he went away.

Mrs. Shears made a statement of the case, and the boarder was fined $10 or thir-Richard Ford and Carrie Powell, colored, who had been on friendly terms for sev-eral years, appeared to have the court set-

"None whatever."
Dick was unable to show what right he had to call the girl to account, and no excuse for his assault could be offered.
"The next time you have a quarrel with a woman," said the court, "you had better not strike her. Thirty days." Did Not Do It. George Dean, a big, able-bodied colored man, who got on "cross-questions" with his better half, threatened to "bus her

"No, sir."
"What was all this trouble about?"
"Separation. We always had trouble when we wanted to separate."
"You had better go home and behave yourselves," the judge told them, and George was released on his personal bonds. Frances Douglass, a colored woman, and a colored female friend were in line because they had engaged in a fight with Susie Lewis.

The trio became engaged in a quarrel and blows followed. Frances was fined $ or two weeks.

Kemp Washington, a tall colored man, with two small bruises on his forehead and a yard of old rag about his head, comd that Waverly Lewis, a relative, had assauted him.

asked.
"Yes, sir."
"And did not you get these wounds when you fell against the bricks?" Lawyer Car-

"No, sir."

The attending physician said that both wounds may have been inflicted by the brick pavement.

A disinterested witness who was called said that no stone was thrown, but that the old man started to run and fell down.
"It was Sunday night when the affair happened," said the witness, "and I told them that they had better be in church."

Waverly Lewis told the court his version of the affair and denied the assault charged. charged. There was a reasonable doubt in the mind of the judge, and the defendant was dis-

Annie Lewis and Becky Bell, the worst of the lot, were fined $10 each, while the others were charged half that amount.

Voudoo Doctor.

Next in line was the "Rev. Dr. W. C. Brooks," the alleged "voudoo doctor," had a fit yesterday, and the court heard Annie Minor was one of them, and she said the old man told her that another woman had changed her luck. He told another woman that there was something in her path, and unless it was removed she would be dead in three months. "Were you frightened?" the court asked.

"No, sir."

"This man," said the judge, "is one of the kind who go about and prey upon superstitious people."

"He's superstitious himself," remarked Lawyer Ricks, his counsel.

Judge Kimball said that this man belonged to the class of persons who victimize ignorant people, but this time he did not happen to run across ignorant people.

"Step up, doctor," said Lawyer Ricks.

"Don't call this man doctor," said the court.

court.

He was sentenced to nirety days, in default of security.

Policeman Evans told the court that a ycung man named Arthur Hoover, who has been in Chicago, returned here recently, and, thinking he was wanted for something, he arrested him.

"This is a case of an arrest on suspicion," remarked counsel.

"Dismissed."

William Jackson, a colored boy, who says is home is in Howard county, Va., was in line because he was found loitering about "I'll leave here today if you let me go," he said to the court. "When will you leave?" "Today." "I'll give you until 3 o'clock to leave, and if you are caught here later than this time you will be sent down."

Marcellius Wilson and Margaret Wilson, his wife, and a young man named Thomas Hassett, who were arrested in a raid near 1st and H streets northeast, were charged as vagrants. Policeman Tracy, who is well acquainted with the trio, gave evidence against them. His complaint against Hassett was that he does not work, but loafs about the neighborhood where he was arrested.

"Did you ever see him work?" asked counsel.

"The most work I ever saw him do," re-sponded the officer, "was to carry beer in Marcellus Wilson was not in court, be-cause he was too much under the influence of liquor when he was arrested.

The court heard additional evidence in the case, to show that the three persons were case, to show that the three persons were sleeping in one room.

A peculiar noise heard in the prison pen caused a break in the proceedings, and it was found that an old soldier named Michael Lanhady had a fit. He was removed from the court, and the hearing of the vagrancy case was resumed.

The defendants' personal bonds were taken faken.

Patrick O'Neill has spent most of his pension money. He got drunk last night and was found in the storm at 3 o'clock this morning.

Patrick has made such a good record during the past month that the judge released him on his personal bonds. Six other prisoners were tried, and five of them were sent down.

FATHER FULTON DEAD.

An Eminent Catholic Educator and Jesuit Expires in California. Catholic circles have been thrown into profound sorrow by the announcement of the death at the College of Santa Clara, California, of Rev. Father Robert A. Fulton, S. J., at one time pastor of St. Aloyslus Church, and more recently professor of English literature in Georgetown Uniersity. Father Fulton was a native of Alexandria, Va., where he was born in 1826 He became a student at Georgetown College in 1842, and became a member of the Society of Jesus not long afterward. He pursued his theological studies at St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore, and, after being or dained as a priest, became known as one of dained as a priest, became known as one of the most zealous and influential Jesuits in this country. He held many important positions in the order, being made superior of the province of New York and Maryland in 1882. Falling health caused him to relinquish this office, and he took the chair of English literature at Georgetown. Several months ago he was transferred to Santa Clara, where, it was thought, the climate would restore his energies; but his illness was too far advanced, and yesterday morning he died there. Father Fulton was a man of great erudition, a fine linguist and a preacher and professor of eminent power. Destitution Reported.

Dr. M. B. Strickler, who was at one time one of the police surgeons, reported a case of destitution to Chief Clerk Sylvester this morning. Mrs. Callas, a widow, with four children, is the subject of charity. She lives at No. 4 Scott avenue, in the county and has scarlet fever in the family. Dr. Strickler reports that he made an effort to have the health office contribute medicine, but his request was refused, for the reason that a physician to the poor was not in attendance.
